

Palos Verdes Peninsula News

Saturday, September 10, 2005

LETTERS

PVNET Is Exceptional

To the Editor:

Palos Verdes on the Net has and continues to be an exceptional student-internship center. Students may participate in animation, 2-D and 3-D design, graphic design, programming, computer tech services, hardware and software troubleshooting, setting up networks, wireless networking, or the most recently developed Multimedia Studio/Channel 33 production and editing, which is sponsored by both the city of RPV and PVNET.

I have had the fortunate experience to coordinate with the center since 1995 as career-internship teacher from Peninsula High School until my retirement in June. President Ted Vegvari offered more than 300 students internships from Rolling Hills High and Peninsula. Each gained insight into computer technology and careers through exposure to computer technology used in hundreds of industries. While interning, students discover sooner what they are good at — and what they like most — rather than later, when it's too late to change careers. Internship hours count toward community service.

Most of the students have continued in areas of higher learning related to various computer fields and many are now pursuing careers with the most outstanding companies in the United States. For information, contact internship@palosverdes.com. The center will be able to provide college letters of recommendation for successful interns.

*Jean Christensen-Etter
Rancho Palos Verdes*